

TRouble CAUSED BY A SHIELD.

Policeman Brooks's Denial of a Charge of Attempting to Levy Blackmail.
Policeman Michael Brooks of Capt. Mount's command, who was accused by Policeman Evans of attempting to levy blackmail on an unfortunate woman in Sixth avenue on Monday evening, says that he was on the sick list, and having got a prescription for his complaint took it to Dr. Miller for advice. While there he met William Reilly, the physician's coachman, who described how a friend had come to him with a woman who wanted a man to pay her, and advised to introduce Reilly. They went to the friend's house in Twenty-fifth street, and thence to Sixth avenue, walking up town. At the corner of Thirty-second street they stopped, Reilly intending to return. "While we were talking," Brooks says, "a woman came up, and said, 'I want to speak to Mr. Reilly.' But seeing that she was soliciting, I said, 'Go along, there, or I'll lock you up.' I did not have my revolver with me." Reilly said, "I am a policeman, and I crossed Sixth street. Near Twenty-third street the woman, who was then with another man, said to me, 'I am Mrs. E. M. Evans. I have been threatened to arrest me.' Evans said, 'What do you mean?' She showed it. Evans said, 'That looks like a wad of money.' I said, 'If you think it is being paid to you, go to the police station.' We went to the two women as witness. Capt. Westervelt examined them, and I was called in. He said, 'He must take it away from me, nor did he reprimand me. No mention was made of money at any time.'

Wanted---Gentlemen.
